Timeless covers songs from the 40s to the 00s.

The ultimate winning group will get the opportunity to record an album at the iconic Abbey Road Studios and have a single released in time for Christmas.

Lindsey said:

"All I can say is; tune in and see if we can make it through to the final.

"We love what we do and this show is a massive platform for us. We are really excited to see what the future holds.

"We work really hard together and travel a lot. I have to thank all of our friends and family for their amazing support."

Sing: Ultimate A Cappella is described by Sky as:

"With absolutely no backing tracks, no instruments and no second chances Sing: Ultimate A Cappella brings together 30 brilliant and diverse a cappella groups in a competition based on raw vocal talent. Host Cat Deeley makes a welcome return to British TV in her first UK presenting role since becoming a mainstay of American TV.

"The seven-episode series will test the groups in three rounds - a medley round, iconic artist covers and a final showdown between two groups - and unlike other shows, there will be no backing tracks or instruments to hide behind. Across six heats, the groups will be judged by experts from the world of a cappella as they attempt to secure a place in the final."
